

North Richmond Community Health Centre

Construction of a new $16M community health centre located in Richmond, Victoria.

The new centre sits over the footprint of the existing building. Half of the existing building was demolished whilst the facility remained fully operational.

Construction commenced in April 2010 with an early works package involving a new car park and services infrastructure.

Partial demolition of the existing building took place in June 2010.

The staged nature of the works saw the project reach completion in early 2012.
